The Cal Poly University campus is located on a hillside with steep slopes. This makes wheelchair access a challenge. However, by utilizing elevators and bridges between buildings, scaling the campus hills can be made easier.

The buildings highlighted in this map have split level plans and elevators. These structures allow people to enter at one end of the building and exit at a higher level, avoiding stairs and steep hills.

There are also some opportunities to use this technique in student housing not highlighted on this map.